About Me

I was introduced to badminton by my brother-in-law in 2008. I found lots of joy in joining different groups and meeting new friends. Most of them are very generous and imparted their techniques and skills. Even after suffering a major knee injury in December 2009 which was one of the darkest moments of my life, I did not give up. With full support from my wife, I persisted with the ACL / PCL surgery and came back stronger and faster. Doctor Cormac and my trainer Nicolas from Singapore Sports Council also gave me lots of confidence during my rehabilitation. Despite knowing I had passed my prime age, my badminton coach Simon played an important role by training me and bringing my game to a higher level. Thank you all!!

“

The Singapore Spirit is a positive vibe that every Singaporean has. A vibe that is optimistic at all times, that will carry not only athletes beyond boundaries and also inspire other Singaporeans to be successful.

About Me

Badminton was never my favourite sport initially. I played badminton recreationally, among family and relatives. It was through friendly sibling rivalry that drove the hunger in me to excel in badminton. My youngest brother is in the national set-up, so I was greatly influenced by him. With the support of my family members, mainly from my parents, I decided to take up the sport seriously.

To me, the Singapore Spirit is something that only we Singaporeans have and we can see this spirit when we celebrate our country's birthday during National Day, cheering for our very own athletes in competitions or simply just by helping one another like the young helping the elderly. This Singapore Spirit is unique, because it contains our country's very own history and our way of life.

About Me

I started playing badminton at the age of nine. I inherited my dad's passion as a sportsman and fell in love with sports. I even took it up as a Co-Curricular Activity from primary school, and now I'm a member of Team Singapore. The reason why I chose badminton and stuck to it is because badminton is the only sport that I can master to the highest level. More importantly, it is the physics, the challenges, and the principles of the sport that has kept my passion for this sport burning. Badminton has made me a better person in terms of principles and values, and also stronger both physically and mentally!
